PROFILE

I am a Postdoctoral Researcher at Aalborg University, where I study how algorithmic systems are designed, adopted, and governed in insurance markets, in professional work, and across the public sector. My current work investigates how the Nordic countries of Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland orchestrate the rollout of AI across their public sectors. My research combines ethnographic observation with quantitative and computational methods. My academic work has been published in the Socio-Economic Review, the Journal of European Public Policy, the Journal of Professions and Organization and the Journal of Organizational Sociology. Alongside my research, I serve as Consultative Expert on Data Use in Insurance at the European Insurance and Occupational Pensions Authority (EIOPA).
